with the proviso that the cut be submitted for the ratification of the membership. The union voted to accept the offer, but the vote was not unanimous. The meeting adjourned with no arrangements for future conferences. The present agreement expires June 1.

Home Labor and Prevailing Wage Demanded on City Work

Unions have been successful in securing the payment of prevailing wages on city work. The city has agreed to pay the prevailing wage for the work of the city. The charter but few contracts have contained these stipulations, and insists that an ordinance shall now be passed to make the charter provisions mandatory. Organized labor wants the ordinance to use the words "prevailing" instead of "usual" wages because the courts have defined the former term while the latter remains indefinite.

ing Commissioner Gragg from Enforcing the Statute—Governor and Attorney General Support the Law

the plain fact that the law is unconstitutional, the law prescribes that contractors on public projects must purchase a certain amount of goods and services from local sources. It was announced that the case would be tried in San Antonio before a three-judge panel.

Hearings: Current Wage Rates. The contractors' application for the injunction followed Commissioner Grant's findings regarding the current wage rate per hour for construction workers in the area of constructing, repairing or improving building, bridges, roads, and other public works.

The contract made public by Miss Perkins on employment conditions was based on returns on unemployment compensation filed with the Department of Labor by the State. These plants had returned information on 42,000 workers since 1929, leaving 784,000 workers in the State. The State had 282,000 employed and 182,000 out of 402,000 unemployed.

Salmon, Ore.—Despite public sentiment against the use of convict labor on public works, the Oregon State Board of Control is wedded to that policy.

The board has advertised for bids for the erection of a light and power plant to be operated by the State here for the use of various State institutions. The State Board of Control said in enforcing the law. It is not to be considered as an effort to establish wage rates, but rather as a determination, based upon adequate evidence, of what constitutes the current wage rates in the industry, as a basis for administering the law."

Attorney General Supports Gragg

Although Commissioner Gragg was certain of his authority to determine and enforce the law, the Central Labor Council, the State Board of Control and the State Board of Labor Relations all took issue with his action. The Central Labor Council, the State Board of Control and the State Board of Labor Relations all took issue with his action. The resolution concluded "protests the action of the State Board of Control and urges that the present bids for the power plant be rejected and that the specifications be amended so that no work shall be awarded to any contractor who has inserted in the specifications that will insure the employment of free labor both in the construction and in the operation of the plant." The resolution also stated that the State Board of Labor Relations was "opposing any award of work to any contractor who has inserted in the specifications that will insure the employment of free labor both in the construction and in the operation of the plant."

Gov. Sterling, who gave his unequivocal approval of the Commissioner's proposed action.

Mr. Gragg announced that in case the injunction is dissolved he will prosecute the contractors and seek penalties for all failures to comply with the law enacted by the legislature, however, that workmen will have no means of recovering the difference between wages already paid and the prevailing rate.

Green Fears Bill Will Not Pass

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today that the fear that the Robinson bill would fail to pass at this time is "unrealistically opposed to it."

"Introduction of the bill," he said, "shows that Congress is finding out that we were right in our fight for the Social Security Act. The bill is merely a gesture, as it comes at a time when Congress is near the point of adjournment. I am afraid it will not pass."

He declared the same consideration that is given to those who invest their surplus money in stocks and bonds, should be given to those who invest their lives in that industry.

On the question of jobs, Mr. Riechberg said that a six-hour day if applied to all classes of work would hold the balance between improving the standard of living by giving employment to more men and shorter hours to those already employed.

He said that the present system of fewer men doing more work is a failure, and that the only way to get the best of both is to have more men doing less work.
